DETAILED ACTION

Priority

The priority claim to PCT/EP2005/001262 is proper and priority is granted.

Information Disclosure Statement

The information disclosure statements (IDS) submitted on 8/10/2006 and 11/10/2008 have been considered by the examiner.Claim Objections

Claim 8 is objected to because of the following informalities: diammonium is misspelled as "diainmonium". Appropriate correction is required.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 6-8 and 13 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(b) as anticipated by or, in the alternative, under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as obvious over Takahashi et al., United States Patent Number 5643775.

'775 teaches culture media for filamentary fungi and notes that media can be composed of any one of a number group of constituents well-known in the art including molasses, sucrose, yeast extract, corn steep liquor, and diammonium hydrogen phosphate. '775 teaches that these are all standard ingredients that can be successfully used in any combination to culture filamentary fungi. '775 also notes temperature ranges from 20 to 40 degrees Celsius are standard in the art. Other parameters are obvious optimizations.

Claims 6-8 and 13 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Takahashi et al., United States Patent Number 5643775 in view of Kobayashi, United States Patent Number 3625826.

The '775 patent teaches the components of applicants claimed media and methods of using them to culture filamentary fungi. The '775 patent also teaches temperature ranges. The '775 patent does not teach the particular combination or concentration of media components or a time of incubation.

The '826 patent teaches that as early as 1971 corn steep liquor, molasses, yeast extract, sucrose and ammoniates were well-know media components to utilize in filamentary fungi culture. The '826 patent also teaches concentrations in a 2 to 50% range, and culture conditions within the claimed optimal range (30 degrees Celsius for 5 days) as well. It would be obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to optimize the concentrations of well-known media ingredients to create a preferable medium and culture system. This would not require undue experimentation as each component as well as the culture conditions used have been known to be advantageous and capable of being utilized together for at least 38 years. As such, the invention was prima facie obvious at the time it was made.

Conclusion

No claim is allowed.
